Valley City State University

Recognized by U.S. News & World Report as one of the top 5 public comprehensive colleges in the Midwest ten years in a row, VCSU offers over 80 undergraduate programs in Business, Information Technology, Communication Arts, Social Science, Education, Psychology, Fine Arts, Health, Physical Education, Math, and Science. A Master of Education degree program is also available. Three concentrations are currently available:

- Library & Information Technologies
- Teaching & Technology
- Technology Education

Students stay ahead of the technology wave at VCSU, one of only 36 laptop universities in the United States. VCSU enhances students learning experience with yearly upgrades in advanced multimedia technology, high-speed wireless networking, and classrooms equipped with the latest educational technology. A student-faculty ratio of about 13:1 gives students one-to-one access to faculty in ways that are impossible at other universities.

At VCSU, students can explore their interests, interact with community leaders, and learn more than they've ever imagined. The experience beyond the classroom better prepares graduates for a rewarding career or furthering their education.
